Excerpt: .you please, Mr. Biggs, they only meant it for a lark, and to teaze me. They made me very angry, and I got quite into a passion; but I had rather not tell who I think they were. Must be known, said Biggs; out with it. Not to-night, please, Mr. Biggs; I ll ask mother about it. Must be known, I say. I ll be bound Sam Thorpe was one, and Tom Rogers another. But Ritchie was silent. They reached Mr. Barker s door, and the boy went round to the back, while Biggs entered the shop, just closing. Ritchie went, as fast as his legs could carry him, to his mother s room, and told her the history of this eventful day. Mrs. Groves was sitting by the fire in her room, weak and feeble, and very helpless, but still she had been...
